CHEAP TRIP TO EUROPE. the Power of All to Go-A Shrawd Busi ness Man Makes the Trip for $157 11—He Thinks He Spent $25 Too Much, Then.

Mr. Philip C. McIlrath, of this city, has just returned from Europe, and en joys the distinction of having lowered all eler. The European trip is, by his nar-rative, robbed of half its formidable feature, and Paris, the heaven of all good Americans at this time, is rendered accessible this side the grave. It becomes possible for people of narrow means to go abroad, and for the lowly in estate to view the world from the top of Elifel Tower.

Tower.

The rumor that Mr. McIlrath had made the foolings of his account book cut a modest figure in the hundreds caused a reporter to call at the tourist's rooms, No. 144 Ontario street, to see if the initial figure of the total was a "3" or a "4." This most remarkable of American travelers seemed to have thived well on his "plain living and high thinking." He is about 50 years old, is 6 feet tail and will weigh at least 200 pounds. He is a prosperous and busy man, and has the direct and independent carriage which inspires respect everywhere, and the wide-awake American business man. After expressing his pleasure at seeing Mr. McIlrath returned from over the sea

"I hear that you succeeded in making the trip on a very economical basis. If you can tell just how you managed to do it, it will benefit a good many people just at this time."

Just at this time."

"I shall be very glad to do so," was the reply, "because I made the trip as I did, principally to see if it could not be done for less than is nepularly believed possible. My total expenses for the trip amounted to just $157 11."

ALMOST BEYOND BELIEF.

"Two hundred and what?" exclaimed the reporter, scarcely crediting his ears.

"Not 200 at all, but 100—$157 11, and that was $25 more than was really necessary for the journey."

"Well, let's see how you managed to do it? Did you keep an account or guess it?" asked the visitor, charitably preparing a way of escape if the cold fluores should happen to spoil a good story in their customary heartless fashion.

"I kept an itemized account," said Mr. McIlrath. "Why, that was one object of my trip, to see how cheaply it could be done without a sacrifice of substantial comforts. You can see it if you would like to."

"Let us begin at the beginning. What would like to."

"Let us begin at the beginning. What kind of an outlit did you have?"

"I did not take any baggage, wore an ordinary business suit, and carried a small grip containing several shirts, collars and neckties, a shoe brush, toot brush, and a hair brush. I dressed just as I would if I were going out on the road drumming for six weeks. No salesman wants to be bothered with a big wardrobe when he is out for business, and I was running this trip on business and I was running this trip on busines wardrobe when he is out for business, and I was running this trip on business principles. I carried a good pocketnife, and a light haversack to be used as I shall describe hereafter."

"Coming to expenses, what did your ticket cost?"

"A round trip from Cleveland to London and Paris and return costs just $101. I putchased it here and on May 16 set sail on the City of Paris, of the Inman Line. My ticket read for the second cabin, where we had the same sleeping accommodations as the first cabin and the rear deck for our use. Our table was a little plainer than the first cabin table, but as both had poor meats and all had good bread and vagetables, there really wasn't so much difference after all. From Liverpool I went direct to London, where I was to spend two weeks. I didn't go to the biggest hotel, but I found excellent accommodations in a private family, where I was lodged for twenty-five cents a night. This was no exceptional chance; there are any number of such places in the heart of London. The rents are high, and people contrive to cut them down by taking good, respectable lodgers. I arranged with the ladies in the house to serve me a breakfast in the dining room. The bill of fare was frugal, but

SUFFICIENT FOR ALL PURPOSES. It included six slices of bread and buttwo eggs and a large pot of coffee a sugar and milk and other trim-ter, two eggs and a large pot of coffee, with sugar and milk and other trimmings. The cost was 12 cents. At noon, if it was convenient, I would go to one of the vegetarian restaurants, where a dinner consisting of oat meal and milk, salads and English pudding is served for 12 cents. If it was not convenient I lunched from the haversack, which I had replenished with bread, irrit and cheese before starting. At night, if I was near a milk depot, and there are thousands of them all over the city, I would get a supper for 10 cents. I did a great deal of walking, so I could see the byways as all two levels in the control of the contro of them all over the city, I would get a supper for lo cents. I did a great deal of walkings, so I could see the byways as well as the highways, and my bus and boat fares did not average more than 10 cents a day. That made my London expenses 70 cents a day. I stayed two weeks and spent a day at the museum, another at Crystal Palace, another at the Zoological Gardens, another at the Derby, and so on. Some of these excursions cost a little extra, and there is where part of my $25 in excess of actual expenses went.

"Did you do as well in Paris?"
"Not quito so well, and still I was not extravagant. My lodgings in Paris cost 40 cents a night, or $550 for the two weeks I remained there. My coffee for breakfast, the best in the world, cost 6 cents, and the bread and frait for my haversack cost 14 cents more. In fact, all my meals cost about 20 cents each, so that my meals cost about 20 cents each, so that my meals and lodgings were $1 a day. It cost 10 cents overy time I went to the Exposition, and that, with the railroad farces, made about 25 cents more per day. I was talked into taking some of Cook's rides' after I was through with the city, and wasted some money and two days' time going around to see what I had already seen by myself. So there was where some more of the unnecessary $25 went. Then I spent a week at Liverpool and Chester, and my expenses between New York and Clovelland, which I have come near forgetting. How much does that foot up?"

The reporter took his pencil and soon the re

"How does it happen that it usually costs an American so very much more than $300 or $300 even to take a trip like yours?"

"The trouble with most Americans is that they drop all the rules of economy they practice at home when they go abroad. They seem animated with the pairfold desire to impress all Europeans with the idea that very American is a millionaire.
